David Hayden Loyde (1835-1922) was born in Springfield, Massachusetts. When he was three, his family moved to Bureau County, Illinois, where his father established a school and was a music teacher. He received his early training from his father, sang in the church choir at age 11, and became a singing leader in the church. He received his education in the local schools and later attended Judson College at La Salle and Illinois College at Jacksonville. He studied music with Philip Bliss and began leading musical institutes and conventions. In 1874-75, he filled a vacancy in the vocal music department at the University of Illinois. He settled in Champaign and opened the Loyde Book and Music Store to serve the students at the University of Illinois. His store supplied books and supplies, music, stationery, toys, photographic supplies, drawing instruments, pianos, organs, violins and small musical instruments, sewing machines, typewriters, talking machines and sporting goods, and novelties for holiday and other seasonal events. He was active in the Baptist Church and wrote many hymns and Sunday-School songs. He died in Champaign.

Fair are the meadows,
Fair are the woodlands,
Robed in the blooming
Which summer brings;
Cheered by the flowers,
Scenting the breezes,
Charmed by the warbler,
Sweetly he sings.

*Beautiful nature,
Robed in thy treasure,
All things to cheer us,
Beautiful things.*

Fair is the sunshine,
Fair is the moonlight,
And the bright stars
Above that we see;
Beautiful noonday,
Beautiful twilight,
Sweetest of concord,
Sweet melody.
