S. N. Penfield
(1837-1920)

Smith Newell Penfield (1837-1920) was born in Oberlin, Ohio. He studied at Oberlin College, in New York, and in Leipzig, graduating from the Leipzig Conservatory. After returning to the U. S., he taught music in Rochester, New York. He moved to Savannah, Georgia, where he founded the Savannah Conservatory of Music and the Mozart Club. He returned to New York and settled in New York City. He studied at the University of the City of NY and founded the 'Arion' Conservatory in Brooklyn. He was organist at the Broadway Tabernacle and served as President of the Music Teachers National Association. He died in New York City. He contributed many articles to "The Etude" and other musical magazines. His compositions included a setting of Psalm 18 as a cantata, an overture, a string quartet, pieces for organ and for piano, choral works, and songs.

There's solemn music in the billows
Of the mighty, restless sea;
Lively music poured from brooklets,
As they gambol in their glee,
There's awful music in the thunders;
Lulling music in the rains;
Music echoed from the forest,
In the thousand living strains.

There's silent music in the flowers,
And the planets' genial fires;
Music grandest in the rivers,
Where they tune their cataract lyres;
There's cheering music all around us,
Thrilling music from above;
And the magic tones should teach us
Sweeter, nobler strains of love.

H. G. Boughan
