W. F. Suds
(1882)

William F. Suds (1843-1920) was born in London, England. When he was seven, the family moved across the Atlantic and settled on a farm in Gouverneur, New York. By age fifteen, he had taught himself the violin, cello, guitar and cornet. He also took advantage of an offer to use a friend's piano, although it meant a three-mile walk after his day's work. Enlisting in the Civil War, he was ordered to report as a musician and eventually became a bandmaster. He arranged and composed many pieces for the band. During the later part of the war, he took his first piano lessons from a French woman in New Orleans. After the war, he trained at the Boston Conservatory of Music. He returned to Gouverneur and established himself as a teacher, composer and music publisher. He directed choruses and orchestras for local events and was the director of the Choral Union of Gouverneur. His compositions include orchestral works, pieces for piano, church music, songs and part-songs. He published many method books and instructional collections including the "Modern Method for the Reed Organ." His music and writings gained great recognition throughout the country. That popularity was manifest by the appearance of a riddle in the "Youth's Companion" magazine: "What composer is found in every washtub?"

Shall I wasting in despair
Die because a woman's fair?
Or my cheek grow pale with care
'Cause another's rosy are?
Be she fairer than the day,
Or the flow'ry meads of May—
If she be not so to me,
What care I how fair she be?

Shall my foolish heart be pined
'Cause I see a woman kind?
Shall a woman's virtue move
Me to perish for her love?
Be she meeker, kinder, far,
Than all other women are?
If she be not so to me,
What care I how kind she be?

Great, or good, or kind, or fair,
I will ne'er the more despair;
If she love me, this believe,
I will die; ere she shall grieve;
If she slight me when I woo,
I can scorn and let her go;
For if she is not for me,
What care I for whom she be?

TERMS OF USE

These editions are available as a service to the choral community, offering inexpensive access to public domain literature. Choir resources can purchase other literature still under copyright, especially to support those creating and publishing new compositions and arrangements. These editions have been created using public domain sources under U. S. copyright law. Out of respect to the research, time and effort invested:

please print and issue an edition in its entirety, retaining notices, attributions, and logos.
please do not consider this edition a source for creating another edition.

If performed, sending a copy of the concert program would be a valuable affirmation. If recorded, notification and attribution would be appropriate professional courtesies and a copy of the recording would be greatly appreciated!
